Who Does the Madison County Planning Commission Serve?

The Madison County Planning Commission serves all the area within Madison County that lies outside of municipal corporate boundaries.

What Does the Madison County Planning Commission Do?

The Madison County Planning Commission provides planning and building services for the unincorporated area of Madison County. The office issues improvement location permits (ILP) for all types of buildings. ILP's certify that a structure complies with the zoning and setback requirements. The ILP requires that a County Building Inspector visit the site and administer proper building codes.

The Madison County Planning Commission Office also acts as a clearinghouse for the Planning Commission Board and the Board of Zoning Appeals. The office accepts, reviews, and processes all petitions to be heard by the boards. The office prepares staff recommendations for petitions and assists applicants in the process of notifying all adjacent property owners of the public hearing. The office also prepares the agendas and minutes for the monthly board meetings. The Plan Commission Board consists of nine (9) members and hears petitions for rezoning, subdivisions, and ordinance amendments. The Board of Zoning Appeals has five (5) members and hears petitions for variances, special exceptions, ordinance interpretations or appeals from an office decision.

Other duties of the Planning Commission Office include:

- Assigning addresses for new construction,
- Processing land divisions in the form of exempt splits or subdivisions,
- Maintenance of zoning maps, and
- Pursuing ordinance and code violations.

New Housing Starts

Over the past 8 years the number of new housing starts has generally increased. The chart below indicates a steady amount of new housing starts over the last two years. The numbers in 2015 and 2016 appears to indicate a higher number of Manufactured Homes being built throughout the county. However, the majority of those Manufactured Homes were constructed in Union Township (29 out of 45), the majority of which were located in Deerfield Run. Taking this information into account, the number of Manufactured Homes has maintained a steady decrease since 2012, with 2014 being the anomaly. The average new housing starts for the last eight years is 41.5 per year.
